How Does a Credit Union Bonus Dividend Work?

Credit Unions take in member's money via savings and checking accounts and lends it out to other members and charges those members interest on the money. If we cannot lend enough money out to our members, we will purchase investments and will collect interest off of those investments. We use the interest money we collect on loans and investments to pay regular dividends on shares, operating costs, salaries, regulatory fees, and put some away as capital for future improvements or as a cushion for the unexpected. When the credit union's income and capital are better than expected, we give the extra back to our members in the form of a bonus dividend or loan interest rebate.

Associate Director Program

The Board of Director's has started an Associate Director Program. An Associate Director attends board meetings, but does not have any voting rights, receives the same publications and training as a director, and provides input into discussions the board may have. We are pleased to announce that Brian Krus applied and was accepted as our first Associate Director for the credit union. If you are interested in learning more about this program, contact Patty Preuss at the Main Office.
